

Useful Information

National Archives of Ireland

www.nationalarchives.ie/genealogy1/genealogy-websites

Public Records Office of Northern Ireland (PRONI)

www.proni.gov.uk

General Records Office of Northern Ireland (GRONI)

www.nidirect.gov.uk/index.htm

General Records Office (GRO – Roscommon)

www.welfare.ie/en/Pages/General-Register-Office.aspx

National Library of Ireland

www.nli.ie/en/homepage.aspx

Irish Genealogy

www.irishgenealogy.ie/en/

Ancestry.co.uk - Irish records

www.ancestry.co.uk/cs/uk/ireland

Findmypast Ireland

www.findmypast.ie

Rootsireland.ie

www.rootsireland.ie

Ulster Historical Foundation

www.ancestryireland.com/?ai_home

Eneclann

www.eneclann.ie

Ask about Ireland

www.askaboutireland

The Irish Times -Irish Ancestors

www.irishtimes.com/ancestor/index.htm

Family search – Irish records

www.familysearch.org/search/collection/list#page=1&countryId=1927084

For more detailed information:

www.mlfhs.org.uk/guides

Archives +

Manchester & Lancashire Family History Society

3rd Floor, Manchester Central Library,

St. Peter's Square, Manchester, M2 5PD

Telephone: 0161- 234 1060 Email: office@mlfhs.org.uk

Researching Irish Ancestors

Many people believe that it is impossible to trace Irish ancestry, having heard that all Irish records were lost during a fire at the Four Courts building in Dublin. This loss occurred during the Irish Civil War in 1922 when the Irish Public Record office, which was located at the rear of the Four Courts building, was burned to the ground. The fire destroyed Ireland's 19th-century census returns, two thirds of the parish registers of the Church of Ireland and all the wills proved in Ireland. However, there are other methods, records, substitutes and resources that the family historian can use in order to trace their Irish Ancestors.

Tracing back to Ireland - How do I Start?

Since you live outside Ireland your first step will be to start your search for your Irish ancestor using the same resources available as for your English and Welsh ancestors. For most family researchers the hardest part will be to discover exactly where in Ireland their ancestor originated.

Ask Questions

The first thing you will need to do is to ask questions of as many relatives and friends of the family as possible. Given the gaps in records, family information can be very important in Irish research. Do not leave this task too long as it might be too late. Remember to ask about names, dates and places and keep notes of all the information you gain since, although this might not seem relevant at the time, it might be just the thing which confirms something else you find. Not all the stories you will be told will necessarily be correct. Some might have the years or even the generations muddled up but there will probably be some truth in there somewhere.

Census

Check ALL available censuses on which your people appear, especially those coming from Ireland. The census only required people to put 'Ireland' as their birthplace but sometimes they included the county or town. Check all siblings who came from Ireland, one might give more information than your own ancestor. They might even have a parent or other family member with them. Check civil and church records in England for all the people who came from Ireland. Check around the area in which your ancestors lived in England. Many came to places where there were already family or friends. Perhaps make a list of any Irish places named in the census around where your people were living. If all else fails, start with this information.

Marriage and baptismal records may name other members of the family as witnesses and these people should also be checked on the census. Besides searching birth, marriages and death records in the parish registers also check in newspapers for obituaries, gravestones for any extra information. Family Wills, if any have been left, could provide further clues.

Family Names

Never forget that the surname you now know might not be the surname or the spelling which started out. The "O" or "Mc" prefix might have been dropped. Your people possibly could not read or write so whatever the census taker, church minister, registrar etc. thought that they heard would be the name they registered. Christian names can be just as difficult.

Other records

Records of anyone who entered the Police, Armed Forces or the Post Office should be checked as these might give birth dates, places and possibly other family details.

Making the leap to Ireland

It is essential to collect as much information as possible about your family before moving on to records in Ireland. It is vital to know the following pieces of information:

- The name of the family
- The parish or townland in which they lived
- Approximate dates when births, marriages or deaths occurred in Ireland

Civil Registration in Ireland

Look for your family in Irish Civil Registration documents. Civil Registration in Ireland started on:

- 1 April 1845 for non-Catholic marriages
- 1 January 1864 for all birth, marriages and deaths.

Note: Before this date church records must be consulted, therefore knowing the religion of your Irish ancestors is essential.

All records for Northern Ireland from 1922 onwards are held by the General Register Office of Northern Ireland (GRONI)

Census, Land and Substitutes

There is a multitude of records that can still be consulted in order to find further information on your Irish ancestors:

- Griffith's Valuation - a mid-19th century survey of Irish land and occupants. (Online)
- Tithe Applotment Books - In old Ireland $\frac{1}{10}$ th of everyone's annual produce was given to the Church of Ireland. This survey was made over the course of 15 years up to 1838 when the payment of tithes in produce was replaced by cash payments.
- Census - A census was taken in Ireland every ten years from 1821 onwards. However, the returns for 1861 and 1871 were destroyed shortly after the census was completed, and those for 1881-1891 were pulped by the British Government during WW1 because of the paper shortage. Those for 1821 to 1851 were destroyed in the Four Court Fire in 1922. Census records for 1901 and 1911 do survive and can be accessed online.
- Parish registers, Occupational records, Military records, Deeds Registry, Estate records, Irish Land Commission records, Religious Census of 1766, Shipping lists and newspapers to name but a few further resources that are available and can be consulted.

Immigration to the UK and beyond.

No official immigration records to the UK were kept as from 1800-1922 Ireland was part of the United Kingdom. But do, consider that many Irish immigrants passed through Britain from Ireland on their way to other destinations and therefore immigration may have been a two-stage process for your ancestor or members of their family.

Manchester & Lancashire Family History Society- Irish Branch

The Irish Branch of the Manchester & Lancashire Family History Society have a great deal of knowledge and are always happy to try and assist with your Irish research.